Fabled Floral

Fabled Floral draws inspiration from the original pattern Fabled Crane and uses a feature peony motif to create a delicate floral repeat. The original was inspired by an exotic pheasant pattern from circa 1820 when the fashion for the Orient was at its height.

Intaglio

Contemporary meets classical with the Intaglio pattern, which combines several embossed textures, popular during the Georgian era, into a modern and stylish design. The tactile ceramic pattern takes inspiration from the artisan knurling and engine turning techniques pioneered by Josiah Wedgwood in the 18th century.

Tonquin - Passion Flower

Tonquin was originally produced on black Jasperware using an encaustic painting technique that required the utmost skill to achieve, the Tonquin design is typically bold and flamboyant, reflecting natural themes that were popular in the early 19th century. In the 20th century the pattern was reinterpreted by the designer and art director Victor Skellern for use on fine bone china.

Passion Flower takes the floral elements from the same Tonquin design.
